

$1.3M refresh spruces up popular Oregon hotel

Apr 9, 2015, 11:49am PDT

★ Save Article 📄 Order Reprints 🖨️ Print

Jon Bell
Staff Reporter-
Portland Business Journal
Email | Twitter

An Oregon Coast hotel has reopened after a five-week closure for a $1.3 million refresh.

Martin Hospitality, which owns the Stephanie Inn in Cannon Beach, updated all the rooms in the hotel with new interior design accents and a more modern feel. The project comes on the heels of a $5 million job in 2009 and a few months after Martin stripped and remodeled the boutique hotel's lobby and dining room.

“This room refresh brings a new sophistication and elegance to the Stephanie Inn and the accommodations available for luxury travel along the coast,” said Ryan Snyder, president of Martin Hospitality in a release.

Georgia Pope of Hill Devine Design & Supply designed the updated look and feel of the rooms, while O'Brien & Company of Wilsonville led construction efforts and Mike Skidmore of Skidmore Janette APD out of Seattle oversaw architecture.

In the past 10 years, Martin Hospitality has invested $20 million in renovation and design projects to its hotels, restaurants and other coastal properties. Last June the Stephanie Inn's gourmet dining room underwent a $100,000 week-long renovation centered on color, lighting, the fireplace, furniture, tableware and linens, and other accent features.

📄 View Photos

An updated room at The Stephanie Inn in Cannon Beach.

A $1.3 million refresh updated all the rooms at The Stephanie Inn in Cannon Beach.

The Martin Hospitality parent company owns and operates multiple luxury restaurants and hotels in Cannon Beach, including the Stephanie Inn, Surfsand Resort, The Wayfarer Restaurant, The Lumberyard Rotisserie & Grill and The Cellar, an upscale wine bar at the center of town.